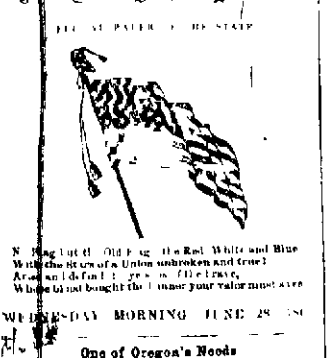
OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE



Nail up that Old Flag, the Red White and Blue
With the stars of a Union unbroken and true!
Around it defend it ye sons of the brave,
Whose blood bought the banner your valor must save

WEDNESDAY MORNING JUNE 28 186

One of Oregon's Needs

Among other drawbacks which hinder the progressive development of this State and prevent a more rapid production and accumulation of wealth by the people, a chief obstacle is the want of cheap and expeditious methods of transportation from the larger and better agricultural portions of the country to the most valuable markets. Every one must see that the growth of the State is retarded in a melancholy degree by reason of the inability of farmers, tradesmen and others to make exchange ready and profitable. Large bodies of our richest lands are so unfavorably situated in reference to any available market that nothing can be grown on them with advantage to the laborer, and in consequence, they lie uncultivated year after year. People who produce nothing except what is required for their own subsistence, are of course, always poor, or at least they can never become wealthy. This is the condition of thousands in this State at the present time. The lands they occupy are of unsurpassed fertility, and if production were stimulated by the construction of suitable modes of conveyance, the increase of wealth and trade would be incalculably great within a very brief space of time.

The better, because the more extensive bodies of good, arable land which Oregon affords lie toward the head of the Willamette valley, and on a southerly line toward California. From the southern boundary of the State to the Columbia river, large tracts of good land lie contiguous to each other. Indeed there are but one or two interruptions by mountain chains—and these mountains are of inconsiderable height and extent—the whole way. There is thus a broad belt of fertile country, extending through Oregon and into California, over which a railroad may be and we hope is to be, sometime built. The construction of a work of this character is precisely what is needed to enrich both these States. On every acre of ground from which the road would be accessible, the commodities which are sold for gold would begin to grow. Mines more valuable and more lasting than any which our people now seek for abroad, would thus be opened throughout a large extent of country that has hitherto produced little wealth simply because the products of the soil are of no value, unless they are conveyed to those who want to consume them.

In making estimates to ascertain whether the probable receipts of a railroad along the line we have designated would afford a fair profit on the money invested in its construction, and also provide for sufficient repairs, it would be no fair criterion to make computations from the present business and past resources of the country. Much may with certainty be counted on from the greatly accelerated growth of every branch of business, which would naturally be caused by the completion of an enterprise like this. In undertaking this work, we should have to rely to some extent, on the increase of wealth which it would bring. Every [illegible] enterprise is at its [illegible] more or less dependent on the subsequent growth of the country in which it is begun. Ordinarily, calculations of this kind do not depend on an certainties, but on what may be safely anticipated as the actual facts.

Until quicker and cheaper modes of transport are provided, the country as a whole, will not become rich and prosperous. Railroads are an [illegible] adjunct of civilization. In the interior of a country, domestic and commercial wealth is a thing of their creating. With a railroad through to California, this State would at once grow rich; without a railroad there will never be any material improvement in our present condition. One of the greatest difficulties that besets us, is the slowness, imperfectness and high cost of transportation from [illegible] where produce is grown to advantageous markets. To provide for this want will be to supply one of our greatest needs.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON TO THE NEGROES. A deputation of colored preachers recently waited on the President, to ascertain something of his policy with regard to the freedmen. The President replied in the words given below. Every friend of humanity must feel a deep satisfaction in that Mr Johnson takes so sensible and so correct a view of [illegible] have endured, of the rights that belong to them, and of the remedy for the amelioration of their present condition.

"Now I want to impress this upon your minds, that freedom simply means liberty to work and enjoy the product of your own hands. This is the correct definition of freedom, in the most extensive sense of the term. There is another thing and I have been surprised that people beyond the lines have not impressed upon you this important idea. It is easy in Congress and from the pulpit North and South, to talk about polygamy and Brigham Young, and debauchery of various kinds but there is also one great fact, that four millions of people lived in open and notorious concubinage. The time has come when you must correct this thing. You know what I say is true and you must do something to correct it by example as well as by words and professions. It is not necessary for me to give you any assurance of what my future course will be in reference to your condition. Now, when the ordeal is passed, there can be no reason to think that I shall turn back in the great cause in which I have sacrificed much and perilled all. I can give you no assurance worth more than my course heretofore and I shall continue to do all that I can for the elevation and amelioration of your condition; and I trust in God the time may soon come when you shall be gathered together in a clime and country suited to you, should it be found the two races cannot get along together."

SAN FRANCISCO AND ST LOUIS.—These two cities are in a certain degree, commercial rivals. Each sends goods into the vast country that lies between them. There is a very considerable competition between those who send freight up the Missouri to Montana and those who dispatch it by way of this place to the same region from San Francisco. The San Franciscans are now complaining of a general decline in business, hence it will not be amiss to suggest to them whether it would not be well to afford us cheap transportation in this direction so that the whole northern trade may be readily commanded. Every steamer that leaves St Louis for the upper Missouri affects in some degree the commerce of San Francisco. A single cargo is of small consequence, but it is known that thousands of tons of goods have been shipped this spring from St. Louis to the mines in our borders.

The Copperhead State Central Committee of California has been called to assemble on the [illegible] of July. The pitiful old organization [illegible] "Democracy" can save itself an infinitude of trouble in California by making no further attempts to contend against intelligent patriotism. Unlike Antæus, the Copperhead party does not gather new strength from being repeatedly hurled down. It is now too feeble to grapple again with those who, if true to themselves, must always be its foes.

Ex-Gov. Letcher, of Virginia, is now a prisoner at Washington and will soon be tried for treason.

SPEAKER COLFAX [illegible] May [illegible] it [illegible] party [illegible] delivered a speech [illegible] prospects and wealth of the mountain [illegible] of the West and showed that in the East the people are looking with interest and hope on the present condition and future advancement of this portion of the common country. [illegible]

He [illegible] Mr. Colfax said:

[illegible] President [illegible] the most lovable of all men whose [illegible] the very night he was [illegible] crime lower to Heaven but the purpose [illegible] It was [illegible] He had placed Abraham Lincoln on the very pinnacle of fame. He did not die because he was Abraham Lincoln but because he represented the nation in its contest with and victory over treason. We might engrave his name on marble [illegible] we might inscribe it on Mount Blanc where that lofty wall four thousand feet in height [illegible] portion of the mountain eleven thousand feet high—that granite spire would [illegible] monuments [illegible] the name and memory of Abraham Lincoln would be forgotten. He would deliver the President's message in the course of his remarks, but had a few more words to say with regard to the interests of the Territory.

(He then also referred to affairs in Colorado.)

Before he started West he was invited to go. He had doubtless been included, said his friends, with the intended victims of the assassination plot and the wild country through which he must pass being infested with savages and guerrillas, he might yet fall a victim. But if he had ever hesitated, when the late lamented President intrusted him with a message to the miners he would have come though the route had been lined with guerrillas and assassins. Desiring to have an interview with President Lincoln in various matters before leaving he had visited the Capital on the eve of his intended trip to the Pacific. He arrived in Washington the day before the fatal night of the President's murder. The city was blazing with illuminations, and Mr Lincoln had been riding round viewing with delight the beauty demonstration of joy. The President was in the most buoyant spirits. He had seen him depressed when reverses were our fortune, had seen him haggard and pale with care and responsibility. He called on him immediately after Chancellorsville, when the President, with tearful eyes took his hand and declared [illegible] would gladly exchange places with any dead soldier of the Army of the Potomac. He bore in his great heart the suffering of the people, modest in the hour of success, bearing the responsibility of defeat to shield his Generals from censure, always firm, always true to his trust, he proved himself the true pilot of the ship of State, standing with his head bared to the storm, not only of rebels in arms but of men in the North who were opposed to him. God bless our noble President! If spirits looked down on the land they loved in life he believed that Washington and Lincoln looked together, to-night on the country one had founded and the other had saved, with heartfelt joy and noble pride.

The President spoke of the downfall of the rebellion with smiles; it was the happiest day of his life, beautiful and glorious as its [illegible] sunset which was passing lovely. They talked of the policy of the government toward the defeated traitors, and upon the President's asking his views, he said: "He could forgive every traitor who was only a traitor, could forgive those who had been swept into the vortex of rebellion by the force of public sentiment in the South or by its [illegible] tyranny. But there was another class [illegible] before secession, sitting in honor and trust in the Capitol, in the Cabinet and in the Halls of Congress despite their oaths as officers of the Government again and again sworn, met in midnight conclave and deliberately plotted the secession of the Southern States and sent messengers to organize and engineer the infernal rebellion without ever taking the trouble to vacate their dishonored seats in the National Capitol—he could not forgive them. God might, but he could not, nor did he believe the President could." Lincoln could not see how it could be done and the country remain at peace. He had tried to be kind even to them and would persist in it by [illegible] them out of the country for the country's good, by giving them to understand that if they remained they would be tried, convicted and executed for treason. On that very night the assassin struck down the man [illegible] only man who could avert the justly [illegible] of an outraged nation against those men [illegible] had such a [illegible] Denver, never were mercy and justice more perfectly personified than in Lincoln and Johnson. If Lincoln had a fault, it was his kindness of heart. Johnson is the man who declared in the start that he would convict and hang those men for treason and he has [illegible] it. Lincoln was the personation of mercy, as Johnson is of justice. They have struck down mercy, nothing can save them from justice. After a cursory reference to his visit to Richmond the President suddenly changed the subject by inquiring if he was going to California. He replied that he was, if there was to be no extra session. The President was confident there would not be, and rising and standing with great animation and emphasis pronounced this speech, which after the terrible events of the night he immediately committed to writing:

MESSAGE OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN TO THE MINERS OF THE WEST.

"Mr. Colfax, I want you to take a message from me to the miners [illegible] I have [illegible] large ideas of the mineral wealth of our nation. [illegible] It abounds all over the western country, from the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific, and its development has scarcely commenced. During the war when we were adding a couple of millions of dollars every day to our national debt, I did not care [illegible] We had the country to save first. But now that the rebellion is overthrown and we know pretty nearly the amount of our national debt the more gold and silver we mine makes the payment of that debt so much the easier. Now [illegible] way. We shall have hundreds of thousands of disbanded soldiers [illegible] [illegible] I am going to try to attract them to the hidden wealth of our mountain ranges, where there is room enough for all. Immigration which even the war has not stopped, will land upon our shores hundreds of thousands more per year from overcrowded Europe. I intend to point them to the gold and silver that waits for them in the West. Tell the miners for me that I shall promote their interests to the utmost of my ability; because their prosperity is the prosperity of the nation, and," said he, his eye kindling with enthusiasm, "we shall prove in a very few years that we are indeed the treasury of the world."

That evening he had called again and was with the President half an hour just before he started for the theatre to which he had been invited to accompany him. But he expected to leave Washington the next morning and having other engagements for the evening, he could not go. Had he gone there are chances he might not have been here now. He knew how general was the disbelief in that love which would lead a man to lay down his life for a friend. But having no wife or child to care for him after he should be laid in the cold ground, could he have gone to the theater that night and in some unknown way saved President Lincoln's life at the cost of his own he would have done it as cheerfully as he should lay his head on his pillow to-night. The President was still in the highest spirits in the evening. As he was departing for the theatre accompanied by the Hon. Mr. Ashmun of Massachusetts—the last walk to the [illegible] of the Executive Mansion he was [illegible] who were shaking hands [illegible] thought seemed to strike the President, who repeated in a condensed form what he had just delivered [illegible] thus showing how important he held it and said to him "Don't forget Colfax to tell those miners that that is my speech to them—a pleasant journey to you. I will telegraph you at San Francisco. Good-bye." [illegible] of his life. These words to-night were the last words of the President on public subjects before the bullet of the assassin crashed through his brain. It showed that amid the exultation consequent on the grandest consummation of the dearest wishes of the President's heart the nation and the interests of the great West particularly of the miners were uppermost in his thoughts. These words were true and prophetic.

FREEDMEN DETAINED IN TENNESSEE.—Chancellor Shackleford, of Tennessee, has delivered an opinion judicially declaring that slavery [illegible] now exist in that State. [illegible] persons were held in custody as slaves by a party at Clarksville. The case had a hearing before the Judge above named, and they were discharged by the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus under the provisions of the law of the State. Tennessee has abolished slavery forever. The action of the people is sustained by the civil courts, and freedom has now all the solemn sanctions which can be given it by organic and statutory law.

The National Cemetery at Gettysburg [illegible]. The last installment of the iron railing that incloses the National Cemetery at Gettysburg was forwarded a few days since from this city. The whole splendid work is now finished. The National Cemetery adjoins the old cemetery at Gettysburg. Between the two there has been put up this iron railing 1,700 feet in length. The front contains a grand gateway, the whole front being 200 feet in length. This gateway will compare in beauty with any known to exist in any part of the world. The grand double gate in the center is flanked by a single one on either side. The two principal columns of the large gateway are surmounted by spread-eagles of corresponding proportions, perched upon a semi-globe. The pattern is rustic, square, with panel work, upon each of which is inscribed the name of a State represented by Union troops in the battle of Gettysburg. Thus the right hand post shows the names Wisconsin, Rhode Island, West Virginia, Illinois, Minnesota, Maryland, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio, and the left bears the names of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine—nine upon each side, eighteen in all. The term "post" is scarcely applicable to columns of such proportions. The lesser posts are of corresponding shape, surmounted by a draped urn. The center piece of the smaller gates is a national shield, the center piece of the large gate is a star in a wreath of laurel. The railing is plain and massive, appropriate to its purpose.—Phil. North American.

House for Jeff. Davis.—A correspondent of the Savannah Herald writes as follows:

Now that everything regarding the movements of Jeff. Davis has a peculiar interest, I have thought it well to give to the public, through the columns of your valuable paper, a fact which came to my personal knowledge bearing upon the subject. When I was in Liverpool, England, now about a year ago, there had just been completed a splendid brick mansion in one of the most fashionable squares of the city, which was generally known and talked of as having been erected from the proceeds of the Confederate loan, as being intended as the future residence of Jefferson Davis in the event of circumstances forcing him to leave the country. During my stay in Liverpool, the windows of the house remained painted white, which according to the custom of that city indicated that the house had been engaged and was waiting for its occupant—a circumstance which gave plausibility to the town talk of its being the sometime residence of the fugitive President of the Southern Confederacy.

The London Spectator of May 6th, has a long article on our new President, which commences as follows:

A very [illegible] determined, it may be very dangerous, but unquestionably a very powerful man, has succeeded Mr. Lincoln. The public in this country has been [illegible] by the formal utterance of Mr. Johnson when accepting the Presidency [illegible] Mr. Lincoln [illegible]

Chaste as Ice and Pure as Snow. The fragrant Sozodont is [illegible] the purest and [illegible] ingredients [illegible] vegetable kingdom. Every ingredient is well known to have a beneficial effect on the teeth and gums [illegible] antiseptic properties [illegible] fragrance makes it really a toilet luxury and a pleasure to use it. [illegible] removes all disagreeable odors, even that of tobacco. It especially removes those ravages which children sustain in their teeth, owing to improper use of sweet and acid articles, which imperceptibly destroy them.

Sold by Druggists throughout the country. 75 cents per bottle.

Health Brightens every Prospect in Life. The effect of a bilious condition of the system is most striking in its influence upon the mind. The common objects of pleasure and enjoyment, become sources of weariness and disgust. All nature wears a sombre aspect. The Wife's Secret.

If I pride myself upon any mental endowment whatever, it is upon that humble one of common sense. I live what is called by the intellectual people a conventional life. I have my pew in the neighboring church, and sit in it twice every Sunday. I know one captain in the army—just such a person as he should be—polished and yet [illegible] but rather modest to civilian males, boastful of his clubs, and giving all his leisure time, which is considerable, to the cultivation of his moustaches; but otherwise I am ignorant of the fashionable world and all its gay doings. I have made no endeavor to break through the gilded pale that separates it from the steady going middle class to which I belong. I do not understand the feeling which prompts my superiors to be ashamed of being seen in an omnibus. Once every day, I return from the city in a yellow one, and if it is wet, I use the same conveyance in the morning to reach my office. I pay my tradesmen weekly. My best sherry is 48s a dozen, and when the captain talks of vintage wines (as he will do by the hour at my table,) I often wonder what he thinks he is drinking. However, with true good breeding, he imbibes it in great quantities, as though it were the best. I do not keep a man servant. Our cook cannot compass an omelette soufflé. My wife trims her own bonnets. We have eight children, who all know the Church catechism by heart, except the baby and the last but one. In short, a more respectable and unfashionable family than our own does not exist in all Bayswater.

Under these circumstances, it may be easily imagined that we are as free from the vices of the Great as we are without their Privileges, and this was, I honestly believe, the case until within a very recent period. When I used to read in the papers that the Lady Lutetia Day (Caltay, of Norman ancestry and bluest blood) had left her husband's roof, and fled with Major Flutterly of the Life Guards; or that it was rumored among well informed circles that the gentleman of the long robe would soon find employment in the domestic affairs of his Grace the Duke of Belgravia, I used to give the prolonged whistle, and remark "Here they are again," in general reference to the habits of the haut ton. I know that our hereditary aristocracy were given to these escapades, which in my own rank of life would certainly be crimes, and I perused such details as the press could furnish, with an avidity unalloyed, I am afraid, with much reprobation. I seemed to be reading of a class of persons whose way of life was too far removed from my own to affect me except as a spectator, just as when I went to the play I found myself in an atmosphere of intrigue, and misunderstanding and jealousy, altogether unreal, and with which I had not the ghost of an experience in common.

Jealousy! Why, I had been married sixteen years without entertaining that passion, so that it was not very likely, however well acted, that that passion should entertain me. Misunderstanding? The thing was impossible, for whenever there promised to be "a row in the pantry"—and every married man will understand me when I make use of that metaphorical expression—I brought it to a head, and had it out, and off we started again (speaking for self and Mrs R.) on the smooth current of our lives, with the little fracas buried forever in its depths. As for the mother of eight [illegible] in love with another man—it is all very well in a stage play, and particularly (with all deference to Miss Annie Dickinson) where the husband is a black man, and, as I have said, bent [illegible] enough among persons of quality; but upon the Notting Hill side of Bayswater any such mischance would, I felt, be out of place and ridiculous—a social presumption, as well as a grave domestic crime.

Imagine, therefore, my astonishment when my opposite neighbor, Peabody, who also calls himself my friend, did me the honor to call upon me a few weeks ago, to speak, in confidence, of the [illegible] conduct of my wife. Having demanded and obtained a private interview, this scandalous old person, who was once an indigo merchant, and yet retains the trace of his calling upon his nose, set before me in detail, a number of curious circumstances connected with the "goings on," as he was pleased to call them, of my wife, which he was not, indeed, prepared to say, "might not possibly be only coincidences, after all" but which he felt it his duty as a fellow creature, and one who had been a husband in his time—here his lips made a dumb motion of gratitude—to let me know. Even as a neighbor, and an inhabitant of a common crescent, hitherto remarkable for its respectability, and which, as I doubtless remembered, had declined to permit Mrs. Jones to put up "apartments" in her window, lest we should be confounded with the lodging house localities; nay, [illegible] by the mere force of its public opinion had prevented No. 48 from being let to a play actor—even in this character, said Peabody, he would feel it to be his duty to make me aware of what was being said, though doubtless falsely, respecting the behavior of Mrs. R. Here I should have locked the door, and informed Peabody that his last hour had certainly arrived, and that he had better make his peace with Providence before I cut his throat; but from ignorance of the proper conduct to be adopted in such exceptionable circumstances, and perhaps from the knowledge that there was nothing but a paper knife in the room with which to effect this righteous punishment, I only burst out laughing, and called him a meddling [illegible] old fool.

"Very true," returned he, for he always makes use of that form of words—"very true, but still the facts are worth investigating, even from their singularity. Do you know, for instance, that at eleven o'clock, three days a week, your wife goes out in a cab by herself?"

"No," said I, "I do not; though, if she does it is surely better than if she had any ineligible companion. As a matter of fact, however, she does not do so, for I have offered to go shopping with her twice this week, and she has declined to accompany me on the ground of having a sore throat."

"Upon what day did she give this excuse?" inquired Peabody taking out his pocket-book.

"Last Monday and Thursday," returned I.

"Well, here's a memorandum. Monday, 4th. Saw Mrs. R. start, as usual, at 11. Thursday, 7th ditto, ditto. She could not be going to a morning concert, because she had not white gloves on."

"I will grant that much," quoth I, sardonically, and yet not by any means unmoved by this unexpected intelligence. "My wife does not go to morning concerts."

"Very true," answered Peabody. "Then the question arises, where does she go to? Now, as an inhabitant of the crescent—"

"Peabody," interrupted I, severely, "I acknowledge the right of no man—no, not of the man in the moon himself—to meddle in my affairs upon that ground. I am obliged to you for the interest you have taken in this matter, but the simple fact is that it has been entirely misplaced. I have been perfectly well aware of my wife's movements, and they have had my fullest permission and approbation. I only wanted to see to what lengths your impertinence and [illegible] interference would carry you. That is your hat, I believe; your umbrella is the alpaca one. I wish you a very good morning."

I ushered my visitor out, and then sat down in my private parlor with my elbows on the table, and both my hands thrust into my hair. I had temporarily extinguished Peabody, but I was on fire with jealous apprehension myself. What could it all mean? For sixteen years my wife had never taken any excursion unless in my company [illegible] which, she had given me to understand, she doted; and yet after refusing to go out with me on Monday and Thursday last on the plea of sore throat she had started the instant my back was turned, in a Hansom, or even supposing it was a four wheeler, in a cab with its white gloves on, and [illegible] it was a row in a pantry, and one which my peace of mind demanded to have cleared up at once. "Anna Maria!" cried I huskily from the bottom of the stairs. "Anna Maria, I wish to speak with you immediately."

"Law bless me!" answered my wife from the top story. "It isn't one of the children, is it, John? Pray tell me the worst at once."

"No madam, it is I," replied I stiffly.

"Then it's the kitchen chimney," exclaimed she, in a [illegible] tone. "And didn't I tell Mary to have it swept well up, and I know the fire engines will spoil everything, even if we are not burnt out of house and home."

Was it possible that this woman could have deceived me, as Peabody had said, and yet talk so simply of her children and of house and home? By the time Anna Maria had gone down to the [illegible] town [illegible] I had got [illegible] When she [illegible] with her [illegible] to glow with [illegible] and her voice [illegible] I didn't dare [illegible] what I had in my mind.

"I really have a dreadful day," said I, "I was going to give myself a holiday to-day, and ask you to come with me to Hampstead Heath, and dine at Jack Straw's Castle this afternoon, it being such a beautiful day."

A ray of [illegible] passed for an instant over her features, and then, as if recollecting herself, she began to say that she was very, very sorry [illegible] at the house just then [illegible] until Friday, which was my birthday, [illegible] and where and she would [illegible] This afternoon, however, the thing was utterly impossible.

"Well," said I gravely, "we have not many holidays together and I am sorry. You told me the same on Monday and Thursday, when I offered you a similar opportunity."

"O yes," answered she, shaking her little head, which is very pretty, [illegible] sat upon her shoulders [illegible] it was quite impossible that I could go out with that throat."

How I thought I [illegible] she could not have gone out without her throat [illegible] but Peabody may have told it, not she. Perhaps she never went out at all. Should I not rather believe the wife of my bosom than that scandalous old retired indigo merchant? Was it not base even to suppose Anna Maria of deception? Doubtless it was, but yet I thought I would just satisfy myself with my own eyes.

"Very well," observed I, quietly, "since you cannot go with me to-day, I shall go to the city as usual. [illegible] to-day [illegible] usual."

"Poor dear fellow," said Anna Maria, coaxingly, as she helped me on with my great coat. "I am quite grieved to disappoint you. Good bye, John. Mind you have a good luncheon; it's very bad for you going the whole day without [illegible]."

Ah, what a tangled web we weave," says somebody, "when first we practise to deceive," though after but a little trying, there is no thing easier than lying. I protest I felt like a pickpocket as I lodged and lurked about in a crescent, waiting in the distance my own door [illegible] whether Mrs R. would cross the threshold. I suppose I have none of the attributes necessary to the profession of a detective, for whenever a passer-by cast his eyes on me I felt myself blushing all over, and hanging my head on one side as a dog hangs his tail. I dared not, of course, stop in the crescent, but loitered at the corner of a street which commanded it, now trying to dig up the tops of the coal cellars by inserting the nozzle of my umbrella in their circular holes, and now eliciting mournful music by dragging it against the area railings. Exhausted with these exercises, I had been leaning against a lamp post for about ten minutes, when the door of the house opposite opened suddenly, and a widow lady of vast proportions came swiftly out upon me with her cap-strings streaming in the wind.

"Now you just go away, my gentleman," said she in a menacing tone, "before the police makes you. I know what you're a looking for, and I can tell you she ain't a coming, for I've got her locked up in the coal cellar. I know you, although you have not got your red coat on to-day, and mind, if you get another slice of meat in my house, I'll prosecute you as sure's my name's Mivens."

"Gracious heavens, madam!" cried I, "do you take me for a common soldier?"

"No, sir," answered she indignantly, "but for a tuppenny ha'penny Life Guardsman, who never saw a shot fired in his life, and if ever you come after my Jemima again—"

I turned and fled—into the arms of the abominable Peabody. "Make haste!" exclaimed he, "there is not a moment to be lost. No, the cab is coming this way, you may see for yourself whether I am not right this time."

And sure enough, which should drive by, at a rapid rate, but Anna Maria, in a four wheeled cab, and without her bonnet, and and with a flower in her hair! This blow, coming so close upon the attack of the widow lady, was almost more than I could bear. "Where can she be going to?" gasped I, half unconsciously. "It's the most extraordinary thing I ever heard of."

"I have heard of similar things," returned Peabody, quietly, "although I never experienced anything of the sort myself. Of course, I don't know where she is going to, but the direction she has taken is towards St. John's Wood."

I hastened back to my own house, and with the air of a man who has forgotten something, began to search in the pockets of a great coat hanging up in the hall.

"By the by," said I, as the servant who had let me in was disappearing, "I think your mistress must have got it after all. Just run up, and tell her I want to see her for a minute."

Emily Jane, who had been in our service ever since we were married, turned as scarlet as her cap-ribbons. "Sir," said she, bolder than brass, "missis has just stepped out; she has taken two of the little girls for a morning walk."

"Which two?" inquired I, looking this abandoned young person full in the face. Her subtle spirit was cowed by this course of procedure. She replied that she did not know—she didn't recollect—she hadn't paid particular attention, but rather thought that it was the two youngest—all in a breath.

"In that case," rejoined I, pointing with withering scorn to the perambulator, "how come this here? No, Emily Jane, your mistress must have taken out with her to-day the same two children that she took on Monday and on Thursday, when her sore throat was so bad that she could not go out with me."

"Yes, sir," replied she, "it was the same two."

"Emily Jane," said I, solemnly, "always tell the truth. I know all. Where is your mistress gone to all by herself to-day, with her hair so neatly arranged, and a flower stuck in the left-hand side of her head? and that after telling me she was too busy to move out. Concealment is worse than useless. Where is she?"

"Wild horses shouldn't do it," returned the domestic, resolutely. "I told her I would keep it dark, and I won't betray no confidence as has been reposed in me. You must find it out all of your own head, sir. O dear, O dear!"

Here, to my confusion, Emily Jane cast her apron, by a sudden and dexterous movement, over her features, and in that blinded condition rushed down the kitchen stairs like a bull stung by bees.

At that moment the front door bell rang with a violence such as none of our visitors, except the captain, ever dare to use. My wretched heart seemed to experience a little throb of joy. He at least, thought I, [illegible] I confess my suspicions had been turned in this direction, for was it not his profession to guard us from foreign foes and to destroy our domestic peace—he at least, I say, was less there was more than one. I dared not trust myself to finish the reflection, but opened the front door with my own hands.

It was somebody in uniform but not the captain. "Telegraph for Mrs. R.," squeaked the boy in his shrill, thin voice, "please to sign on the right and side." Then dancing a double shuffle upon the door step, in order to keep himself warm, he broke forth into ballad, "There's somebody in the house with Dinah, there's somebody in the house I know, there's somebody in the house with Dinah."

I didn't like his impudence, and I didn't like his song, but there was nothing for it but to submit. What could Anna Maria be doing with telegraphs? "From Rupert Merrington, 6 Camden Villas, St. John's Wood. Pray be punctual this time. I am engaged after twelve. I trust you will be looking your best, not pale, as on Monday and Thursday."

"There's somebody in the house with Dinah, there's somebody in the house I know." I rushed out with the receipt in my hand, and the boy snatched it and took to flight. I saw that I was dangerous. What could this dreadful message mean, or rather what meaning could it have but one? Rupert Merrington! Not at all a steady sounding name to begin with; the sender too was evidently no business man, [illegible] he would not have crowded his twenty words so [illegible]. It had military smack all over, and I didn't like that either. [illegible] Merrington of course was an assumed name. The handwriting was good and was far unlike the captain's, but the [illegible] people don't write their own telegraph messages. I felt that something [illegible] [illegible] In a couple of minutes I was in a Hansom bound for Camden Villas, in a state of mind [illegible] and yet I [illegible] often [illegible] [illegible]

What [illegible] there [illegible] I wish all the [illegible] the human heart [illegible] [illegible] what a wicked looking [illegible] were these which I was now passing? [illegible] and in [illegible] certainly St. John's Wood possesses a patent for [illegible]

"Which number, sir?" shouted my driver through the little hole in the roof. [illegible]

"I am sorry to hear it," grunted I, passing my pocket handkerchief [illegible] mind [illegible] for his [illegible] evinced [illegible] I know [illegible] fault than I am miserable. Please to pull up at No. 6."

Of all the wicked looking houses in Camden Terrace, No. 6 was, it seemed to me, the wicked[illegible]. The front [illegible] which [illegible] window winked [illegible] in the sunlight, and in the garden was a little grotto, [illegible] the purpose of [illegible] which was [illegible] little [illegible] The drawing room shutters were closed. [illegible] gave me some satisfaction [illegible] [illegible] that Mr. Merrington [illegible] glanced at the gay attire of the servant girl who answered my summons [illegible] resolution.

"Is Mrs. R. within?" I [illegible] assumed [illegible] indifference.

"Well, [illegible] but [illegible] just at present. Mr. Merrington [illegible]" pushing my way in. "I want to see my wife."

"Oh, your wife is it, sir?" [illegible] with [illegible] if you please, although it's a [illegible] place [illegible] You will find them in the drawing room [illegible]

"What? there," exclaimed I passionately, pointing to the closed windows.

"Yes of course, sir! That's the room they always sit in."

They always sat in! [illegible] sort of thing must have been going on [illegible] year.

I cleared the two little flights of stairs in a couple of bounds, and bounced the drawing room door like a catapult.

I found myself in a large [illegible] dark, and lit from upon one side [illegible] window (invisible from the [illegible]) [illegible] in the centre [illegible] raised structure hung with purple [illegible] something a scaffold [illegible] royalty, and up in [illegible] wife in an unlovely [illegible] attitude [illegible] countenance that she only [illegible] company manners. [illegible] stood a gentleman with [illegible] velvet [illegible] her portrait. He [illegible] [illegible] particular [illegible] entering the room [illegible] towards my wife [illegible] for an explanation [illegible] moment [illegible]

"It's only my husband, Mr. Merrington," returned she. "O John, I am sorry that you found me out, for I had meant [illegible] to be a pleasant surprise to you on your birthday next week. This was to be my last sitting, but one, and it was the [illegible] I have taken [illegible] ignorant of my coming here. That stupid Emily Jane must have let it out."

"No, my dear," said I, "I discovered the fact for myself, through the telegraph, and really I couldn't help coming to [illegible] how the picture was getting on. It was very kind of you. And, dear me, Mr. Merrington, what a charming likeness!"

"Well [illegible] see," rejoined he deprecatingly, [illegible] ing a room with a skylight, I am obliged to block up those windows, and manage how I can. It makes the room dark, and I am afraid [illegible] to stumble at the drawing room door."

"Yes," said I, [illegible] that was it. [illegible] it came to head first [illegible] I only thought I'd look in on my way to the city [illegible] another moment, and [illegible] I have myself no time to lose."

I gave the maid five shillings, and thought it would be more likely to [illegible] her silence [illegible] chuck under the chin. [illegible] from Bunhill Row [illegible] place. Fine [illegible] situated) to tell him that I would not make use of him any longer, but the fact was that, during the last few weeks I had been making my wife sit for her picture, which he was to come and pass his judgment on [illegible] so [illegible] it was [illegible] [illegible] was a question as to whether [illegible] her was an improvement [illegible]

But I knew that Emily Jane would tell Anna Maria all about it. However, nothing was said until my birthday arrived, and with it the portrait, for which the dear creature had saved up her pin money, and put herself to the greatest inconvenience. I declare my heart smote me for my base suspicions, when I looked upon it [illegible] which had never been [illegible] before. [illegible] day she said, "By the by, when that telegraph arrived for me from Mr. Merrington, it did not make you jealous at all, did it?"

"Oh dear no, my darling," [illegible] "Impossible! Not, of course, that you are not beautiful enough to make all the world fall in love with you, but I never dreamt of such a thing."

"That's all right, John," said she, kissing me; but there was a wicked twinkle in her kind eyes as she added dryly, "I am glad to hear you say that, for do you know, my dear, I almost thought you were just a little jealous."—Chambers' Journal.

LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,

Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing, and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable ever known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.

LILLIE'S LOCK OPENED

New York, September 2, 1864

GLOUCESTER, March 26, 1864

Messrs TILTON & McFARLAND,
Safe Manufacturers, Boston, Mass

Gentlemen—From representations made by Mr. Lillie, I was induced to purchase of him one of his

So Called "Fire Proof Safes."

On the 15th of February last, a fire occurred in our block which destroyed a number of buildings and in own with the rest. We trusted our books, papers and all in the safe. After the fire the so-called "safe" was taken from the ruins, and on opening it we found that Everything had been Destroyed.

We send you the safe with what is left of the papers, and you will see that not one of them is legible or a thing enough to sustain its own weight. Having the curiosity to know how our neighbors fared in this fire, we noticed McKenzie & Hardy just opening their safe (TILTON & McFARLAND'S make) and its contents were found to be

In Perfect Condition.

This led us to further investigation, and we found to our astonishment that from the large amount of combustible material in Messrs. McK. & H.'s cellar—such as lard, pork, etc.—their safe was subjected to a much greater heat than that of our own, we being in the clothing business and had but little in the cellar. There was another of Lillie's safes here subjected to the same fire faring, however, no better than ours.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servants,

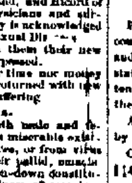
TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES!

Dr Gibbon's Dispensary,



617 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned to this State, after an absence of one year, during which time he has visited all the principal hospitals of Europe, among them those of Dublin, London and Paris. The following celebrated hospitals of London are among those visited by the Doctor: Guy's, High street, Borough; St. Bartholomew's, Smithfield; St. Mary's, Camb Place, Pad.; Lock, Harrow road; St. Luke's, Old street; University, Gower street; Westminster, Broad Sanctuary, Charing Cross, Agar street, Strand, London, Whitechapel road; Royal Free, Gray's Inn road; King's College, Portugal street.

DOCTOR GIBBON has also visited Doctors Acton of London, Parker of Birmingham, England, and Ricord of Paris; who are considered the best physicians and surgeons in the world, and whose authority is acknowledged to be the highest in the treatment of Sexual Diseases.

DOCTOR GIBBON has obtained from them their new mode of treatment which cannot be surpassed.

DOCTOR GIBBON has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with new facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies—see that they are cured for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his specialstudy for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in registered letter, or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

Prevention Better than Cure.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, dupe the unwary. Some of the self styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco, are tradesmen, and became too lazy to work at their trades. Some are thimble-riggers, shoemakers, newspaper carriers, intelligence office keepers, etc. Look over the San Francisco Directory and you will not find their Medical Institutes in it, but you will find their former occupation in it. Look at the Directory for 1862 and 1863. The only way to avoid imposition is to make inquiry. It will cost you nothing and may save you many regrets. [illegible] advertising [illegible] out of ten [illegible] begins their [illegible] safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Doctor Gibbon [illegible] [illegible] certificates, "pretended patients" [illegible] Doctor Gibbon will satisfy persons who may call at his office of his ability [illegible] that he possesses [illegible] Consultations FREE [illegible]
